The ConSoulTant is her stage name, but her real name is Selita. The name "the ConSoulTant", as defined by the artist, is a software consultant whose alter ego consoul listeners with music that makes you feel good. Boasting 14 great songs from her debut album "Spend the Night", this multi-talented singer, songwriter, and producer takes listeners on a ride from Pop to Smooth Jazz, Euro Dance to Reggae, Balladeer to Drumline. If you flip the radio station song after song, you still wouldn't hear this much diversity.

"Spend the Night is a huge pop record from an artist that seems to fit just about every musical environment she's put in. Whether it's a house tune, soulful ballad, jazzy quiet storm sort of thing, pure pop, or modern rhythm and blues...she's got the chops to do just about anything she wants. Spend the Night is an enjoyable listen and definitely worth spending some time with..."

The ConSoulTant is rated  for everyone. Her great vocals and dance presence is one of the main reasons why audiences her performances. Imagine a swirl lollipop consisting of the rock aroma of Natasha Bedingfield, the smooth texture of Sade, the rhythmic zing of Rihanna, and the zest of Michael Jackson; that is the flavor of the ConSoulTant. From her titled track "Spend the Night", a Latin influenced dance track, to "Watch Out", a song with a unique blend of drums and a Clint Eastwood impressionist, to "One Step Away... a well written song that showcases her vocal range with a hook line that is classic and somewhat reminiscent (in a good way) to Vanessa Williams' hit, Save the Best for Last..." TAXI - World's Leading Independent Artist & Repertoire, the ConSoulTant delivers great music and talent - one song after another!

The ConSoulTant is a fresh, funtastic, & family-friendly artist. The news about this exciting artist is starting to spread and her fan base is rapidly growing on Facebook, Twitter, and MySpace. You can catch her performing locally at some of Atlanta's most prominent venue sites: Philips Arena, Turner Field, and Atlantic Station. You can read the "Buzz" centered around the ConSoulTant in the Atlanta Journal Constitution, Access Atlanta and other news and reviews online. Her tour to promote her album "Spend the Night" will begin 2011 with an upcoming worldwide video release "Have U Googled Yourself 2Day."

Life and Background

Selita's love of music began when her parents would play their music or listen to the radio everyday on the family's stereo system. While her dad played the latest hits from all genres of music, her mom would teach her to dance. Barely three years old, Selita courageously walked up the choir pews when called by her mom to come join her and sing with the choir at Sunday church service. From that day forth, she has never stop singing.

Selita knew early in childhood that performing would be her destiny. While riding along with her parents in downtown Atlanta, Selita saw go-go dancers performing high above behind a clear glass window with bright red lights. As the car passed by the dancers, Selita's eyes lit up like a Christmas tree as she shouted to her parents, "That's what I wanna be!"

Selita later learned to play the violin, clarinet, and saxophone. Her greatest gift of music would come with the passing of her grandmother, Bertha Harris, where Selita received the family heirloom - the grand piano. Selita learned to play by ear and began writing and recording songs. She performed in the marching band, symphonic band, jazz band, and the church orchestra. Some of her many career influences during this time were from prominent artists like Michael Jackson, Prince, Earth Wind & Fire, Bee Gees, ELO, Anita Baker, Sade, Aretha Franklin, Shannon, The Charlie Daniels Band, Barry White, La Bouche, and Chic.

Selita purchased a small 4-track recording studio which started her interest as a music producer and recording artist. Music had always been the ConSoulTant's true passion but a love of another kind began to take hold - computer programming. Selita graduated from Georgia State University with a degree in Computer Science. Her family's financial hardship became a motivating factor in her decision to start a software business to provide financial stability. Initially, this strained her dream of pursuing a music career, but with renewed vision and family motivation, Selita would get her music swagger back in a big way! She began working on her debut album in her at-home studio built by her parents. Triumphant, Raging Sky Records was launched - the label that has produced her long awaited album "Spend the Night".

"All my life I have had a tremendous love for all styles of music and have always wanted to be a performing artist. For years, I have worked hard to establish my career goal as a software consultant and now I am ready to pursue my lifelong musical dream as the ConSoulTant."
